Barbara has not been feeling very well. She has a sore throat and it is hard for her to talk. Her mum takes her to see the doctor. It is not very far in the car. She makes sure Barbara wears a warm scarf. The doctor starts by asking her to open her mouth and say "ah." "Ah," says Barbara. The doctor looks into her mouth. "Ah, you have a throat infection," he says. He gives her some tablets, and soon the sore throat has gone. Now she is able to go and play in the park with all her friends.

Open your mouth wide.
